MARRIAGE NOTICES

The South-Carolina Gazette.

[The South Carolina Gazette was a weekly newspaper founded in Charles Town in the province of South Carolina in the year 1732 by T. Whitmarsh. The first issue of it appeared on Saturday, January 8, 1732. It was not the first paper established in South Carolina. On Monday, July 10, 1732, Eleazer Philips, Jr., died in Charles Town, and the Gazette on Saturday, the 15th, following announced: "On Monday morning last died Mr. Eleazer Philips, Printer in the Town." Two years later his father, Eleazer Philips, Sr., a bookseller in Charles Town, advertised in the Gazette for a settlement of all debts due himself or the estate of his son, Eleazer Philips, Jr., for news, printing, etc. Special mention is made of subscriptions due Eleazer Philips, Jr., for six months of The South Carolina Weekly Journal. Now, if that paper had run for exactly six months prior to the death of Eleazer Philips, Jr., then it was established at the very date that The South-Carolina Gazette was established, but as no mention of a contemporary is made by The South-Carolina Gazette

it is to be presumed that The South Carolina Weekly Journal antedated it.

The date in parentheses after each record indicates what paper the marriage notice appeared in.]

On Thursday se'nnight last, was celebrated, at the seat of the Honourable Col. Broughton, president of of his Majesty's council of this province, the nuptials of Thomas Monk, of this province, Esq., and Miss Johannah Broughton, daughter of the said Col. Broughton, a young lady of merit and fortune. At which ceremony were present, his Excellency, the Governor, his Lady and several other persons of distinction. (Saturday, January 15, 1732.)

On Saturday last, a certain gentleman, belonging to his Majesty's ship, the Aldborough, met a jolly widow at a public house in this town, where after a full bowl or two, and a little courtship in form, they came to a resolutiou to decide the matter by a game at all-fours: Their bodies and all their worldly goods for life, were the stakes on each side. Fortune favor'd the fair, and she insisting on the wager, nothing remained but for the parson to tie the sacred knot, which was accordingly done that very afternoon. I think this was doing of business.

We hear, since that, the bride protests against hasty weddings, if ever she should be a widow again; and resolves to try her next before hand, at another game besides all-fours. (Saturday, January 15, 1732.)

On Monday evening last (as we are informed) Miss Christiana Broughton, daughter of the Honourable Col. Broughton, president of his Majesty's council of this province, was married to the Rev. Mr. Dwight. The young lady (we hear) is mistress of all the accomplishments that are requisite to render the state she has enter'd upon perfectly agreeable to its first happy institution. (Saturday, January 22, 1731-32.)

We are inform'd that several serviceable passengers, both men and women arrived here lately from England, and that one of the young men and women being not content to be useful to the country they are now come to, in their single capacities only, have agreed to enter into the state of matrimony, and unite their forces for the benefit and increase of the province. A commendable zeal for the service of our colony. (Saturday, March 4, 1731-32.)

[The last issue of The South-Carolina Gazette of T. Whitmarsh appeared on Saturday, September 8, 1733, Whitmarsh having died of yellow fever the summer preceding. In 1734 L. Timothée came to South Carolina, and on February 2, 1734, issued the first number of The South-Carolina Gazette, thus taking the same name that Whitmarsh's paper had borne. With the issue of April 6, 1734, Lewis Timothy appeared as the name of the printer, thus anglicising L. Timothée.]

Finally, Mrs. Elizabeth Timothy sold her interest to Peter Timothy. The last Saturday issue appeared Saturday, Sept. 20, 1740.
